Griddly Games Gets Colorful with Oversight Game

Richmond, BC - (February 4, 2013) – Can't overlook Griddly Games new Oversight abstract strategy game. The company recently got very colorful with one of its latest games.

Griddly Games' Oversight (MSRP $19.99, for 2 – 4 players ages 7 and up) is a fast-paced 4-in-a-row game. With a 4-color checker style block board, Oversight adds movable squares and tokens for a completely fun challenge to outwit your opponents to get four colors in a row.

Because the game is based solely on getting the colors in order, the game is ideal for multi-language availability. The directions are printed in English, Spanish, German and French.

Reisa Schwartzman, president and founder of Griddly Games, said. "Oversight is a colorful twist on a classic game strategy. Oversight is a simple concept, but when each player has his or her own vision of where the 4-in-a-row will be formed, the colors may not line up as planned. It's classic game fun."

To play Oversight, players, on their turn, can either place a token on the board, or shift an entire row or column of moveable squares over by one space. The rules are simple but the game gets increasingly challenging as players learn from their mistakes and predict their opponents' moves.

Oversight joins Griddly Games' Wise Alec family trivia game, Words of the Wise and Chronicles of the Mind brain games, and the company's Griddly Headz™ sports-themed strategy games that include the top-selling Griddly Headz NASCAR® Racing Game, Griddly Headz Baseball and Griddly Headz Hockey.
